CARLISLE WILL MAKE THE AWARD MONDAY

Premium Offers Make the Interest Rate on the New Issue a Little Below 3 Per Cent-Total Bids Amount to $154.370,900,

WASHINGTON, Nov. 24 .- The bids for the $50,000,000 bond issue recently offered by Secretary Carlisle were opened at the Treasury department today shortly before 1 o'clock. At 4 o'clock it was stated at the department that a hurried calculation showed that the total number of separate bids was 297, aggregating $154,370,900. The largest bid was the syndicate bid of the United States Trust company, Drexel, Morgan & Co. and others, at 117.077 for the whole amount or none. This was the best bid offered, as the aggregate of bids above this figure were about Railway Age. The commissioner's letter is as and without any accident of note. gate of bids above this figure were about $10,324,150, leaving about $39,675,850 at a less figure. It therefore seems quite probable that the syndicate bid will be accepted, although Secretary Carlisle stated that he could not express an opinion as to the result until next Monday, when the awards will be made. According to the terms of this bid the government will pay 2.878 per cent in interest on the $50,000,000, as against 2 per cent carried by the first issue. There is a possibility, however, that a close calculation will disclose the fact that there is a sufficient number of bids at a better rate than this, which, with the second syndicate bid at 115,8398, or 2.839 per cent, make a combination slightly more advantageous to the government than the other, although this is very improbable. Altogether the result of the bids is eminently satisfactory to the treasury officials, as it shows that not only was there a brisk rivalry for the bonds, but the rate of interest demanded was even lower than was generally expected.

OFFERED TO TAKE THEM ALL.

Secretary Carlisle shortly after noon held a zonference with treasury officials for the purpose of deciding whether the bond proposals should be opened in public or private. At 12:45 o'clock a large delegation of bankers present and representatives of the press assembled in Assistant Secretary Curtis'. $10,324,150, leaving about $39,675,850 at a follows:

purpose of deciding whether the bond pro-posals should be opened in public or private. At 12:45 o'clock a large delegation of bank-ers present and representatives of the press assembled in Assistant Secretary Curtis office to hear the bids announced. In the corridor outside was a large gathering of correspondents, who could not, owing to the limited capacity of the room, be admitted. Among the bidders present were Mr. J. Pier-pont Morgan of Drexel, Morgan & Co., bankers of New York; Robert Bacon of E. Rollins, Morse & Co., bankers of Boston; Albert Stethelmer, broker, New York; F. W. Reim-ick, with Kidder, Peabody & Co., bankers, Boston; Pliny Fisk, of Harvey Fiske & Co. bankers, New York.

The reading of the bids closed at 1:50 p. m.

The aggregate, including both bids of Drexel, Morgan & Co., amounted to about $155,000,000, counting only those above five million. The $50,000,000 bid provides that $40,000,000 of bonds are to be delivered in New York, $3,000,000 at Boston, $3,000,000 at Philadelphia, $2,000,000 at Chicago and $2,000,000 at San Francisco. The bid is made by the United States Trust company of New York, Drexel, Morgan & Co. of New York, First National bank of New York and Harvey Fiske & Sons. They add the information that the following parties are interested with them in the joint bid: Drexel & Co., Philadelphia; J. S. Morgan & Co., London; National Bank of Commerce. New York: Chase National bank. New York; Fourth National bank, New York; Na-tional City bank, New York; Hanover National bank, New York; First National bank, Chi-cago; Mutual Life Insurance company, New York; Gallatin National bank, New York; Merchants National bank, New York; Manhattan company, New York; Morton, Bliss & Co., New York; Heidelbach, Eckelheimer & Co., New York; J. & S. approved the apportionment of the appropriation of $250,000 made in the sundry civil act passed at the last session of congress for the survey of public lands. The allotment, according to states, is as follows:

Amount. State.
$ 3,000 California
$ 5,500 Idaho
$ 5,500 Mentana
$ 1,500 New Mexi
$ 11,000 Oregon
$ 7,000 Utah
$ 28,000 Wyoming

In making this apportionment preference

was given, as was required by law, to surveys and townships occupied in whole or in part by actual settlers, and of lands granted to the states of North Dakota and South Dakota, Montana and Washington upon their admission to the union. The only consideration which Nebraska receives is the last Thursday from a six months' sojourn in steamer City of New York, landing in New York last Friday, after a most disagreeable voyage, which lasted more than two days onger than the scheduled time. For five days on the return voyage their steamer Wright, chairman of the strike commission, passed through terrific gales and storms, but has addressed an answer to the open letter the passage was accomplished without danger to the commission recently published in the Judge Strawn was found at his office in the First National bank building Saturday afternoon, busily sorting and reading several hundred letters and documents which had accumulated during his absence. He desisted long enough, however, to chat entertainingly with The Bee reporter for half an hour. He re-lated many incidents of the trip and gave the result of his observation in the different cities which he visited.

"I am very glad to talk for The Bee," said Judge Strawn, "for it is to The Bee that both Mrs. Strawn and myself are indebted for many little courtesies extended to us by the officials of the American steamship line. You will remember that during our stay abroad Mrs. Strawn contributed a number of articles to The Bee. After we had secured our assage for the homeward voyage the general agent of the American line at London learned hat Mrs. Strawn had been a regular contribuor to The Bee and looking us up informed us that he would be glad to extend us any courtesy he could. Consequently we found urselves transferred to one of the finest and most luxurious suites in the steamship, and it was our pleasant surroundings that did relieve the monotony of the stormy voyage home VIRTUE OF THE COMMONS. "Many points of our tour have already been fully covered in Mrs. Strawn's letters to The Bee. Our visits to the House of Commons and to the French Chamber of Deputies have been related, and I do not know that I could add much to what has already been written that would be of especial interest to The Bee's readers. From a political standpoint, I may say that I was much impressed with many points of sumuch impressed with many points of su-periority possessed by the English form of parliamentary government over the more cumbersome procedure in our own congress. Mind you, I am not critically comparing the two forms of government with any idea of drawing conclusions unfavorable to our own congress, but the English Parliament, or rather the lower branch of the English Parliament, possesses features which might be reproduced in the United States with good effect. In England the government is essentially ministerial, but the ministry is so essentially ministerial, but the ministry is so essentially ministerial, but the ministry is so closely identified with the House of Commons that it is the Commons that governs and not the ministry. This fact is, of course, so well known that it is idle to mention it here, but it is a fact which proves that the people are in closer touch with their government than they are in the United States.

"We visited the French Chamber of Depu-

We visited the French Chamber of Deputies and the French Senate and found much to observe in both that was of interest and value to us. Our visit to Switzerland was also an enjoyable one. Of course, our trip included all the principal cities of Italy and we spent days and weeks among the treasof art accumulated through the cen-

FASCINATING RUINS. "I can say, however, that the time we spent among the ruins of the formerly buried city of Pompell was the most interesting and the most enjoyable of our trip abroad. There First Lieutenant Albert S. McNutt, Ninth is something about Pompell that carries the visitor back through the centuries to the time when the city was the most famous of the pleasure resorts of the great Roman he city destroyed by Vesuvius that suggests the museum. There is no assembling of relics, no reconstructed buildings or walls, no retouched decoration or plaster casts. Ar-tificiality is gone and you stand there in the city itself, with its streets paved as they were paved eighteen centuries and more ago, and where the original conception of the fantry, will proceed to his home and await artist remains in its proper place untouched by the hand of time. We walked where Rome walked dim centuries ago, and we stood where Rome stood, and we did not feel that we were surrounded with the guide books and catalogues of the modern museum. "In 1740, to drop into the language of the historian, it was discovered that underneath the orchards and vineyards that had been planted for centuries, was still to be found the city of Pompell. The Italian government, with a forethought for which the world must give it credit, at once asusmed entire control of the ruined city. The work of excavating the ruins was conducted entirely under the numbers of the government. As a result the old city, once the glory of the Roman em-pire, is still preserved against the hand of the vandal and the relic hunter. Barbarism tore down the marble walls of the Colissum and with it constructed buts for the savage peasantry. The same barbarism tore up mo-saic pavements and with the fragments built the enclosures for its cow pens. But Pomwall, every statue, remains in its proper place, every decoration has been preserved. You walk the streets of the city just as you would have walked them nearly 2,000 years 'The streets are all paved, many of them with the finest marble. The palaces con-structed of marble still stand, the upper stories, which were constructed of wood alone being destroyed. Crossing the thresh-old the visitor is greated with the word "Salve," wrought in mosaic in the pavement. Then he passes into the atrium, or large outer hall. In this hall will frequently be found a marble bust of the owner, with his name engraved on the pedestal. Passing through the atrium the visitor finds himself next in the impluvium, generally a circular room open to the sky, and with a marble basin in the floor. In Pompelian dwellings the roofs sloped inward, so that all the water that fell during the rainy season was collected into the marble basin in the center of the impluvium. This room is almost invariably surrounded with beautifully fluted columns, sometimes of marble and again of stucco closely resembling marble. Beyond the impluvium is the tricinium, or dining was room. Opening out of this room are the rday sleeping apartments. The walls of these rooms are freecoed in beautiful tints, the floors are of marble with intricate borders in

"The wine shops, the bakeries with their ovens, the s gas over the shop doors, all serve ovens, the s gns over the stop doors, all serve to vividiy impress upon the mind of the visitor that he is in a city that from all appearances may have been deserted yesterday. In the wine shops the huge jars which furnished the receptacles for the wine still stand in their proper places. In the bakeries are still to be found the shelving of marble and often in the ovens are found the charred loaves of bread left by the baker as he rushed from his shop in a vain endeavor to escape from his shop in a vain endeavor to eacape from the rain of fire, ashes and lava that in three days buried the city and its inhabitants. I know of no spot in Europe that offers so much that is attractive to the tourist as Pompeli. Whole volumes might be fill d w th the descriptions of its ruins and still the sub-ject could not be exhausted. ject could not be exhausted.

'From Italy we visited Austria, Germany, the Rhine and many points of interest, not forgetting the battlefield of Waterloo. We followed Victor Hugo very closely and our conception of that greatest of all European battlefields—greatest in its significance—was greatly heightened by examining the field with the greatest of French authors as a guide. I would like to describe the many things which attracted our especial notice, but one hardly knows where to commence or where to leave off. I can assure the read-ers of The Bee that our trip was delightful and profitable beyond all expectation, and our happiest wish to all is that they may be able to go over the same ground."

PLANNING A GREAT OBSERVATORY, Widow of Prof. Proctor Daulres to Have a

Monster Telescope Constructed. SAN DIEGO, Nov. 24 .- A proposition is now well under way to erect on Mount San Miguel, about eighteen miles from this city, an observatory with the largest telescope world; an observatory in which all empire. There is nothing in the ruins of civilized nations shall have not only a scientific but a financial interest. The scheme at first reading is so stupendous that it appears visionary. Negotiations have been going on for several years and have reached a stage where it was impossible to longer keep the matter a secret. It has been known for years that the wife of Sir Richard A. Proctor has been desirous of founding a memorial in honor of her de-ceased husband, who, when living, was a brilliant luminary in the astronomical world. Mrs. Proctor finally selected, from personal observation and experiment, the summit of Mount San Miguel. Contributions for construction are asked from all civilized nations as well as governments and individuals, and for its subsequent maintenance, by an issue of certificates for orchard and fruit bearing bonds. The practical reasons for the selection of Mount San Miguel by Mrs. Proctor are the remarkable clearness of the atmosphere, the freedom of that locality from fog unequaled number of nights and days. It is positively ascertained that nowhere on the globe do the same conditions obtain.

CHICAGO, Nov. 24.-The affairs of the R. Head Brokerage and Investment company are brought into the circuit court on a bill filed by Thomas F. Lawrence, a partner in he firm, against Richard G. Head and Alfred H. Warren as co-partners. The complainant makes charges of misappropriation of the company's funds and asks for an accounting from both defendants. Lawrence says the company was organized in Denver in December, 1887. The concern carried on a profit able business in buying and selling cattle throughout the west, and within a few years, complainant says, had acquired possession of herds worth $500,000. Prior to November 30, 1894, he alleges Head diverted to his own use $50,000 of the profits, causing a loss of $22,500 to himself and depreciating the value f the capital stock until it was almost worth-less. Between November, 1891, and May, 1893, it is averred Head made away with $10,000 more than belonged to him. Warren, meanwhile, it is claimed, had put $5,000 in his pocket. May 15, 1892, the business was practically discontinued, but Lawrence says he has been unable to obtain a settlement from his partners. He claims Head owes him $6,000 on outside accounts.

COMMISSIONER UTT'S CORRESPONDENCE

Enterprises that Want a Habitation and a Name at This Point-What Has Recently Been Done in the Building Line.

The Commercial club is in receipt of more propositions for the location of factories and other large establishments than ever before in the history of that organization. Capitalists are beginning to look about them for the purpose of investing some of their surplus, while everything is at bedrock, so that it is reasonable to assume that the season of 1895 will be one of great improvement so far as this city is concerned.

The destruction of the Morse-Coe shoe factory and the Hammond beaf packing establishment by fire is a cloud with some silver in its lining from the fact that these firms are going to rebuild at the earliest opportunity and Hammond & Co. already have a large force of men at work, thus giving employment to many men who would have otherwise been out of employment. This packing company will erect a new beef killing establishment as fast as men and money can put it up. The new building will cost between $135,000 and $150,000. The shoe factory has received about $79,800 insurance money and this sum will likely be expended in repairing the damage done by flames some time ago. This year up to the 14th of November 720 uilding permits had been issued by the building inspec or. The amount covered by th se permits aggregates $690,467, and while this is a small falling off from those issued last year, it must be remembered that a good many large structures commenced last year were not completed until this season, and these amounts are credited to 1893. For the first eleven months of 1894 the building permits will average about $69,000 per month. The largest number of permits was issued in March, when the total aggregated $150,000. amount of permits issued last year was $975,-

WHAT HAS BEEN DONE.

Among the more expensive structures completed this year are the Omaha club house at the corner of Twentieth and Douglas streets, which cost in the neighborhood of occupancy. The permit for this building is credited to 1893. The Boston store at Sixteenth and Douglas streets was erected this year at a cost of over $100,000, and Paxton & Vierling built a new foundry at the Seven teenth street crossing of the Union Pacific tracks which cost them about $25,000. Mul-ler's candy factory at Twenty-eighth and Leavenworth streets cost $12,000, and the Schiltz roof garden at Sixteenth and Harney streets cost $18,000, while the Omaha Brewing company's stables on the corner of Fifteenth and Grace streets cost $12,000. The new warehouse built by John Harbach at Twelfth and Harney streets required an expenditure of $15,000. Among the more expensive resiences erected this year are: Herman Cohn, 214 South Thirty-second street, $15,000; Charles Offut, Thirty-ninth and Davenport streets, $15,000; Dr. John Shelby, 1707 Cali-fornia street, $10,000, and some others costing from $5,000 to $8,000. Forty-four residences costing between $2,300 and $5,000 have been rected in various portions of the city, and thirty-four more ranging in price from $1,500 to $2,000 have been built. Sixty-two dwellings and cottages have been completed at an expense not less than $1,000 nor greater than $1,500, making a total of 140 well constructed and substantial homes for residents of this with a daily capacity of 200 tons of this sweet fire seems to be beyond control. Residents WANT TO COME HERE.

In speaking of these new enterprises Com-missioner John Utt of the Commercial club said: "We are receiving propositions nearly every day from outsiders who desire to locate n Omaha. The only trouble in securing these institutions seems to be that they ask too much assistance from home capitalists, but seems as if the stringency was bound to ease funds, and the suspension caused no flurry up by the first of the year. I think there is in business circles. There was a small with-svery probability of Omaha having the largest drawal from other banks, but they are in no beet sugar factory in the world next year. danger. The pro-posed plant will cost not less than $175,000. and when completed will have a capacity of 200 tons of sugar per day. This estimate is based on securing ten pounds of sugar from 100 pounds of beets containing 13 per cent of sugar, which is the average percentage. The plan is to erect the plant and take $75,000

subscribe the remainder. In case we cannot raise all the money we have reliable assurances that we can borrow $50,000 to assist us after the plant is built. "The Oxnards claim that they cannot pay more than $4 per ton for beets since the bounty has been taken off, but we will guar-antee to pay $5 per ton for all that can be raised in this vicinity. The plan of this en-terprise will be presented to every farmer livng near Omaha and all will be asked take stock in the concern, paying for the same when they market their beets. give them two-thirds cash and credit them with the remaining third on their stock. This is the plan pursued in Germany, and under this system farms have increased in value and stocks have paid dividends, so that they have received a great deal of benefit. Ex periments in Douglas county and in Pottawat-tamie county, Iowa, show that from fifteen to eighteen tons of beets can be raised on an acre. At $5 per ton this would make a valuable crop on any piece of land. The building of such a plant will be opportune and of benefit. A great many of the Omaha business me have expressed their willingness to subscribe

TOPEKA, Nov. 24.-An attempt was made to rob the State Bank of Nortonville at Nortonville early this morning. The door of the vault was shattered and the outer rim of the safe door was blown off, but the robbers were evidently frightened away, as they did not complete the job and secured nothing. Nothing was known of it until this morning, and there is no clew to the robbers. A horse and buggy that was taken during the night was found near Atchison this morning, and it is supposed the robbers used it in making their escape.

BREAKWATER, Del., Nov. 24.-The fire on the Mallory line steamship Lampas, from Galveston for New York, which put in here yesterday, reached between decks aft during the night. The big tug North America continued throwing water on the fire until early this morning. It is thought the last spark has been extinguished. The water is now being pumped out. The vessel is now lying easy and but little damage has been done.
